

when pulling the cue back, the posterior arm need lowered a bit to keep the cue moves horizontally.
during cue power development, the start point is the ring finger, then naturally the posterior arm.

static gesture when holding the cue:
middle & ring = hold the main weight of the cue.
index & thumb & little relax on the cue without exerting any stress on the cue.

develop the cue power:
the start point of the power is at ring finger, then the middle finger.
other fingers just relax and no extra pressure is exerted on the cue.
